“CEREMONY”

Shamanism in northern Mongolia

A Documentary Film by Sas Carey

The word shaman evokes a range of mysterious images and feelings. Filmmaker and energy healer Sas Carey has spent 20 years learning about Mongolian, culture, medicine and shamanism. Carey brings these to life in her short film Ceremony, which she will share and discuss in this special One World Library Project program.

Life is changing rapidly in Mongolia, even in the remote and pristine north where Darhad and Dukha reindeer herding shamans are found. “Ceremony” lets the audience witness this traditional way of life before it changes. Footage for the documentary, released in 2015, was taken over a twenty-year period and includes intimate glimpses of the geographical and cultural environment.
